

The Incurious

lively

Give me but a Wife I respect not to find Aish Virtue and prize in one.

Female confound No goddels for me tis a Woman I prize and he that seeks more is more curious than wise.

No goddels for me tis a Woman I prize and he that seeks more is more curious than wise.

Be she young shes not Stubborn but easy to mould
Or she claims my respect like a Mother if old
Thus either can please me since Woman's prize. And he that &c

Like Venus she ogles if wanton her eye
If blind she the roving of mine cannot spy
Thus either is lovely for Woman's prize. And he that &c

If rich be my Bride she brings tokens of Love
If poor the further from Prides my remove Thus either contentis me for Woman's prize. And he that &c

I neer shall want converse if Tongue she keeps
And if mute still the rarity pleases me less
Im suited to either for Woman's prize And he that &c

Then cease ye profane on the Sex to dissent
If you're wit to discern no Perfection they want
Each fair can make happy if Woman we prize
And he that seeks more is more Curious then I &c
